ATTRIBUTE CHOLERA MORBUS TO DRINKING FLOOD WATER.

Mild Epidemic Causes Physicians to Advise Boiling the Fluid to Destroy Coll Communi.

A mild epidemic of cholera morbus is reported in St. Louis, and several physicians attribute the presence of the disease to a germ in the water which residents of St. Louis are compelled to drink since the recent overflow of the Mississippi and Missouri rivers. Coll communis is the name of the germ which is responsible for the trouble.

Nearly a hundred cases of cholera morbus have been treated at the city's three dispensaries daily for ten days, and private practitioners meet many instances in their practice.

While the mortality traceable to the malarial is low, the symptoms are, in most cases, extremely painful. Cholera morbus is not communicable by contact with the sufferer. Contagion is possible only through drinking water which has not been sterilized by boiling or some other process.

Doctor E. J. Ernest and Doctor J. W. Humphrey, at the central dispensary, are among the physicians who attribute the epidemic to unhealthful water.

Doctor Ernest last night said:

"Cholera morbus is a germ disease. The germ, I believe, finds its way into the water from the weeds and grass and other vegetation which have been submerged by the recent floods.

"The infected water is draining from the lowlands, where it had remained stagnant until the fall began, and from that source, I think, our present supply of water is coming.

The germ attacks the digestive tract of the stomach and causes an acute inflammation. The fever extends to other parts and cramps and vomiting follow. Prompt treatment is usually administered because the patient is forced to seek relief from his suffering. Death results only rarely and then only when complications exist.

The best treatment for cholera morbus, as for most similar diseases, is preventive.

Water intended for drinking purposes should be boiled, as the most convenient and certain method of sterilizing it. Heat sufficient to raise water to the boiling point is sufficient also to destroy the germ.

"When the symptoms of cholera morbus manifest themselves the patient should call a physician. It must not be understood that the present epidemic is either unusual or severe, but it is noteworthy as indicating

HAVE LOW DEATH RATE.

Statistics Gathered by the Church Show That It Is 2.24 Per 1,000 for the Year Just Closed.

REPUBLIC SPECIAL.
Boston, June 26.—The announcement of the death rate among Christian Scientists caused considerable satisfaction among the 8,000 scientists in Mechanics' Hall this afternoon, and the reason for this favorable showing was found in the testimonies given by members from all over the world in regard to cures effected, many of them by absent treatment. During the last three years the clerk of the mother church has sent out printed requests asking that he be notified when any member of the mother church has "passed on."

To-day he reported: "The result of the information thus gathered shows that the death rate in the mother church is 2.24 per 1,000, against the death rate of 18.75 per 1,000 in the city of Boston for the year 1902. The mortality in the membership of the mother church is lower than that of a year ago, as will be seen by the comparison, 2.34 for this year and 2.32 for 1902."

sections of this country and Europe, even including Australia, and one by one they rose and gave their reports of the condition of the faith in the section they represented. One man told how his church has grown from nothing to an attendance of nearly 500 every Sunday, almost entirely due to a number of remarkable cures he had been able to effect.

"During the past year sixty new churches and societies have been established, making the total number 60,789, many of which have erected large and substantial church edifices. The number of additions to the membership of the mother church in Boston for the year was 2,886, 2,695 of whom were admitted at the last communion."
